

COVID-19 Tests for Summer Camps and Groups Serving PreK–12 age Children

Order COVID-19 testing supplies for the summer

DOH is offering at-home COVID-19 rapid antigen tests for summer camps and groups that serve PreK-12 age children and youth to distribute this summer. This opportunity is for camps and extracurricular organizations—recreational or educational—that serve children and youth during the summer months, such as club sports, outdoor education centers, etc. Camps can place their orders throughout the summer.

Here's what camps or extracurricular organizations need to know:

- The camp/extracurricular organization must have participants that are in the PreK-12 age range to be eligible for these resources. However, anyone within the eligible organization can use the testing resource.
- The camp/extracurricular organization does not need to be directly affiliated with a school to request tests, so long as the population they serve includes kids in the PreK-12 age range.

At-home tests can be sent home for individual use or self-administered. These tests cannot be conducted or resulted onsite by someone other than the individual without an MTS license and a licensed medical professional authorized under state law to perform administration of the test.
