

Your life, your health, your way.

DOH 970-154 February 2014

It's time to be more in charge of your health!

This guide is about you and your life...who you are now and what you want to do in the future. It also includes some information and gives you some activities to do that will help you be more in charge of your life, be active and healthy and be able to do more of the things you want to do now and in the future.

Getting Started

So what's next for you?

You are probably thinking more about what you want to do with your friends this weekend, than about the home work that is due tomorrow. Since you have some special medical needs, those are also on your mind. Sometimes you may feel your parents are still treating you like you were a little kid; and at other times you may feel like all the things you have to do and think about are just too much. It's easy to forget how much you have learned and how much you have changed over the last few years.

The first step in being more in charge of your health is to take a look at who you are now, and how much you have changed since you were a kid in middle school.

What You Can Do

Now is a good time to learn as much as you can about your health care needs. Here are some things you should be able to do by the time you are ready to start high school.

1 Tell someone the name of your health condition (your diagnosis).

2 Make a list of your medications (with their correct name) when you take your meds and why.

3 Tell someone what you have to do to stay healthy (You probably have heard your doctor tell you these things, but most teens expect their parents or guardians to remember all this stuff).

Don't Forget:

If you want to be able to do things on your own, like go on a school trip, or go to the mall, or stay overnight with a friend, you need to be more in charge of your health. Also, you need to know what to do in case of an emergency and your family is not around.

Maybe today is a good time to talk to your family about taking more responsibility for your own health care. Remember, parents are more likely to give you more privileges when you show them that you are more responsible.

Look at the list below and circle the things you could take more responsibility for.

1. Taking my medications when I am supposed to.
2. Order my medications when I need more.
3. Call to make an appointment with my doctors.
4. Read books to learn more about my condition.
5. Look things up on the Internet about my condition.
6. Help keep a notebook that has information about my health care.

Now write down some other things that you could take more responsibility for: _____

My Life

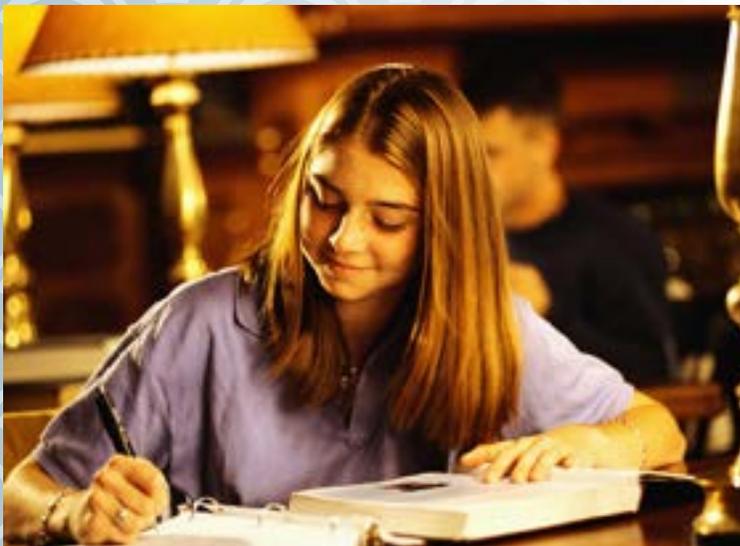

Growing up can be really great: new friends, and more things you can do on your own.

And It can be really hard: more responsibilities; finding friends who are really friends; dealing with lots of changes in you and your life. And having a chronic health condition and maybe feeling that you are a little different can make it even harder.

One thing that many teens do to deal with all the changes, and keep in touch with who they are and what they are feeling is to keep a journal.

Some write in a spiral notebook and some type into a computer. But they all find that spending the time to put thoughts and feelings into words and onto paper can really help make sense of what is going on.

Expressing your feelings in writing can help to keep things that bother you from going around and around in your head. Writing down your goals for school or for taking more responsibility for your own health care can keep you focused and help you see how much progress you are making.

Try it for yourself! What do you have to lose?

Growing up with Special Health Care Needs

Growing up with special health care needs can present many challenges. However, young people with chronic health conditions and disabilities have been able to meet these challenges and reach their goal of being independent and having a good job. To be successful, they had to:

- Take responsibility for themselves
- Manage their own health care
- Be as physically fit and healthy as possible

Time Out for Definitions

Chronic is a word that means lasts a long time.

Health condition is another way of saying disease or disability. Some people refer to children and adolescents who have a chronic health condition as “children and youth with special health care needs.” However, most teens do not like the term “special” when it is used to describe them.

Families—There are all kinds of families. Some teens live with one or both of their birth parents. Some live with adoptive, foster or stepparent(s). Some live with one or more grandparents, other relatives or family friends. There are all kinds of parents and families. If the terms used in the next sections of this book don’t fit your family living situation, just substitute the ones that do.

Pediatrician—A doctor who is trained to take care of infants, children and teens.

Family Physician—A doctor who is trained to provide primary care to both children and adults.

Internist—A doctor who is trained to take care of adults.

Primary Care Provider (PCP)—A doctor who takes care of patients for many years and knows about all of their health care needs. A PCP can take care of many of the health care problems that people have and help patients find a “specialist” if they need special tests or special kinds of medical services. Everyone should have a primary care provider who can help them get the health care that they need.

Specialist—A doctor who treats one kind of health problem or treats problems with one part of the body. For example, an oncologist is a specialist that cares for patients with cancer. A cardiologist takes care of problems with the heart. Specialists usually do not deal with health problems that are not in their area of specialty.

Health Care Transition—The process of getting ready to leave your pediatric doctors and get your health care from doctors who are trained to care for adults.

Staying Healthy

As you have probably heard from your family, having a child with a chronic health condition (like diabetes, asthma, cystic fibrosis, and epilepsy) can take a lot of planning.

Below are some things that families do for a child who has a chronic health condition. Put a check by the things that your family does to help you be healthy.

My parents or another member of my family:

- Tell me when to take my medications
- Order my medications when I need more
- Schedule appointments with my doctors
- Take me to my medical appointments
- Come into the examination room with me
- Tell the doctors about how I am feeling
- Answer the questions that the doctors ask
- Ask the doctors questions about my condition
- Take notes about what the doctors say
- Remember what the doctors say to do
- Explain to me about my health condition
- Read books to learn more about my condition
- Look things up on the Internet about my condition
- Keep a notebook that has information about my health care (for example, my diagnosis, medications I take, names and phone numbers of my doctors)

List other things your family does to help you be healthy:

Taking control of Your Future

It's time to be more in charge of your health care.

Where ever you're going from here, you have more responsibilities; things like keeping track of assignments and homework or work hours. This shift in responsibility (from your teachers and your parents to you) is to help you prepare for college or vocational training, work and your future independence.

Since you have learned how to be more responsible and do more things for yourself in school, it's a good time to start taking more responsibility for your own health. You know that you need to be as healthy as you can, in order to learn in school, hang out with friends, and do all the other things that you want to do.

On the page before this one, you checked off some of the things that your family does now to help you be healthy. Take a look at that list again, and think about the things that you can do right now or want to learn how to do this year, so that you can be more in charge.

Responsibility & Freedom

You can write down some of the things you would like to do for yourself, or learn how to do.

Most teens say that they have more responsibilities in high school. Most high schools are big and busy.

You have a different teacher for every class – and you have to find your way from classroom to classroom. You have more responsibility for keeping track of your assignments and homework. You probably use a notebook to write down and keep track of your assignments and other things you need to remember. And many teachers and parents say that teens in high school get to make more decisions for themselves and have a lot more freedom. Maybe too much freedom.

And most teens have heard:

“With privileges come responsibilities and consequences.”

They say these responsibilities and consequences get you ready to be an adult and have a job and be on your own.

Responsibility, Privileges & Consequences

Write down some of the things you are responsible for at home and school. What privileges have you earned by meeting your responsibilities? What consequences have you faced when you didn't? Write down whether or not you think the responsibilities and consequences are fair or not fair.

	At Home	At School
Responsibilities (fair/not fair)
Privileges (Stuff I get to do)
Consequences (fair/not fair)

Imagine your Life As An Adult

Another way of looking at yourself is to think about some things in your future — like how long you want to go to school, what kind of job you want, and where you want to live. Below are some questions to ask yourself.

School and Work	Where I Will Live	Living Independently
I plan to go to high school Yes Maybe No -----	In my own house or apartment (with room-mates or by myself) Yes Maybe No -----	Be financially independent (support myself) Yes Maybe No -----
I plan to finish high school Yes Maybe No -----	With my parents Yes Maybe No -----	Drive a car Yes Maybe No -----
I plan to go to college Yes Maybe No -----	With other members of my family (brother, sister, aunt) Yes Maybe No -----	Get married or have a steady partner Yes Maybe No -----
I plan to have a job when I am an adult Yes Maybe No -----	Another place (Specify): _____ _____ _____ _____ _____	Raise a family Yes Maybe No -----
What kind of jobs would you like to have? _____ _____ _____ _____ _____		Have lots of friends Yes Maybe No

What do Others Think?

Another way of looking at yourself is to think about what other people think you are like — your classmates and friends, the people in your family, your teachers and others. Below are some words people might use to describe you. Check the ones you think apply to you or write in your own.

Talking with The Doc

NOW is a good time to get ready to be more in charge of your next visit with a doctor. Here are some things you should be able to do by the time you are ready to start high school.

- 1 Spend some time alone with the doctor (without your mother or father or other adult).
- 2 Ask your doctor for answers to the questions you have about your health.
- 3 Let your doctor know when you don't understand.
- 4 Answer many of the questions that the doctor asks about how you are feeling and how you have been doing.

If you think about it, your doctors probably ask about the same stuff every time you see them.

First

Write down the questions that your doctors ask at every visit. It's okay to ask your family for help remembering what these questions are.

Second

Now pick one or two questions you would like to answer at your next doctor's visit. Let your parents know that you would like to be the one to answer these questions. Try writing down what your answer would be.

Write out the questions and answers.

If the doctor asks: _____

I could say: _____

If the doctor asks: _____

I could say: _____

Getting answers to

Your Questions

Remember, when you are alone with your doctor you can talk about some things you may not want to discuss when your parents are in the room. So it is important that you learn how to speak up for yourself, ask the questions that are important to YOU and then remember what the doctor says. It's OK to write down and take your questions with you, to help you remember. Or you can give the written questions to your doctors, and let them read them themselves.

Write down one or more questions you have about your condition and how to stay healthy.

Next time you see your doctor, take these questions with you and ASK!

Doctors want patients to have the information they need to be healthy. And they appreciate it when patients take the time to think about their questions, and bring them to their visit. Some doctors are happy to have patients e-mail questions to them.

What to say when You Don't Understand

Sometimes it's hard to understand and remember what the doctor tells you. Sometimes they use words you don't really understand. Sometimes they talk too fast. Sometimes they give you way too much information. Sometimes they don't really answer the question you ask. Sometimes it's easier to remember if you can read something, rather than having them give you a lecture. Since doctors really do want their patients to have the information they need to be healthy, you need to let them know when you really don't understand what they are talking about.

If you don't understand, you might say:

- Please tell me more about that.
- What does that mean in simple English?
- Could you explain that to me again?
- Could you write that down for me?
- Where can I find more information about this?
- Is there something you can give me to read?

What else could you say when you don't understand?

Me Now & Then

To see how you have changed, think about how things were when you were in middle school. Below, write down how you spend your time, what you do and what and who is important to you now — and how things were back then. In some ways you are different and in other ways you may be the same.
